a passion for paper

ANA BUREL
MONTENEGRO ARTIST

It's a four-hand project," says Burel, who works with her partner, Alan, in their studio in Cetinje, Montenegro. The pair's work is a blend of traditional Montenegrin folk art and modern design. Burel's work is often inspired by the world with a focus on nature and the environment.

In neighbouring Argentina, Valeria Cárdenas runs her studio by the sea.

In Buenos Aires, the studio of Valeria Cárdenas is a hub for paper artists. Her work is a blend of traditional Argentine folk art and modern design. Cárdenas's work is often inspired by the world with a focus on nature and the environment.

Up north on the Caribbean, Noreen Murphy creates Irish folk art prints with roots in her family's Irish heritage and culture. A strong local influence can be found in the way she designs her products with flowers, leaves, and traditional motifs, which you can find on her shop, www.noreenmurphy.com.

cheeky, charming, quirky

There's a focus on some of the most creative, often quirky, British paper artists, and their work is a blend of traditional British folk art and modern design. The artists featured in this section are creating work with strong, often graphic, influences and a focus on nature and the environment.

Take Catherine Rose and Ruby, who work in the UK. Their work is a blend of traditional British folk art and modern design. Rose and Ruby's work is often inspired by the world with a focus on nature and the environment.

It's everywhere in the world, but there's a particular focus on the UK in recent years. There's a great range of styles, from folk art to modern design. It's a great example of British folk art design.
